Seattle-based Zeevo, a provider of business, finance and IT consulting services and products to clients in the aircraft leasing, utilities and consumer product industries, has hired Ethan Ross as a consultant.

Ross joins the company from Irish lessor AerCap, where he was a senior manager for strategic planning analysis for over four years, according to his LinkedIn page. He joined Zeevo on 16 June.

Ross will help Zeevo offer its clients cash-flow forecasting expertise, especially in relation to aircraft and engine leasing, the company says.

"We will develop solutions to meet our aviation clients' needs to stay profitable and maintain a strong financial position by reducing exposure to risk, analysing trends and determining the optimal aircraft and engine fleet status during any part of the asset's life," says Ross.

Earlier this month the company hired Sandra Telfare as its treasury management head.
